

Intendente, Lisbon

Not long ago, most Lisboners steered clear of this former red-light district north of Martim Moniz square. But redevelopment has brought in artGala and artGama and Jovita Vasconcelos's Kit Garden, a sculpture that now sits in the heart of the neighborhood. Behind the dazzling facade of a former tile warehouse, an outpost of A Vida Portuguesa (avidaportuguesa.com) carries vintage brands and local wares hand-wrapped fine of Tricana tama, Ash Brita soups, hats from the Azores. On sunny days, locals pick the explosive tables outside O das Joanas (28 Largo de Intendente, 210-428-819-421; www.oidasjoanas.com) for Mediterranean dishes like Salmonado smothered cod, then head to the 19th-century town house Casa Independente (casaindependente.com), which hosts screenings and concerts on its patio.

A Vida Portuguesa, (Lisbon) tile warehouse, The National Building, on Rua, 280-281, 210-428-819-421, a street market in Belem.

